JEWISH DEFENSE ORG GETS HERNDON VIRGINIA NEO NAZI MEETING CANCELLED

Unlike 2008 (see article below), this year the Jewish Defense Organization was able to get the biennial meeting of the neo-Nazi American Renaissance Party led by Jarad Taylor cancelled. Taylor planned to hold it at the Dulles Airport Westin in Herndon, Virginia but thanks to the JDO, it cancelled. To verify this call 703-793-3366 or call the manager or Mr Catalan at 703-793-3366

White Nationalist Group's Meeting Prompts Protest

Jewish Defense Organization Urges Herndon Hotel to Halt 'Neo-Nazi' Conference in February

A militant Jewish group is pressing a Herndon hotel to halt an upcoming conference organized by a white nationalist group based in Northern Virginia. The Jewish Defense Organization is calling on supporters to push the Crowne Plaza Dulles Airport hotel into canceling a Feb. 22-24 conference for the New Century Foundation and its American Renaissance Magazine. The Jewish group calls the foundation a "neo-Nazi" organization and says that it has worked with white supremacist and former presidential candidate David Duke. "The reason we want it stopped is these are neo-Nazis. There's no question," said Jeffrey Adler, a spokesman for the Jewish Defense Organization. David Welliver, the hotel's general manager, did not return calls seeking comment. The magazine and 13-year-old foundation were created by Jared Taylor, an Oakton resident who calls himself a "race realist" and advocates an end to all immigration and all laws forbidding discrimination. In a telephone interview last week, Taylor, 56, said that genetics is the overriding reason for differences in intelligence between the races and that this accounts for inferior test scores by blacks compared with whites, and by whites compared with Asians. He also argued for an end to affirmative action and other efforts to close the "achievement gap" between white and black children, saying these are politically correct but ultimately useless attempts to overcome innate differences between people. Taylor also disavowed any association with neo-Nazi organizations and decried efforts to close down the conference. "It seems that if anybody is a Nazi in this group, it's the ones trying to force the other group into silence," Taylor said. "Frankly, I find the behavior of these people truly contemptible." Taylor said about 250 people are expected to attend the conference. Protesters rallied when the biennial American Renaissance Conference last met, in Herndon in March 2006. Last March, a Canadian university rescinded its invitation for Taylor to speak, saying threats by protesters raised the concern that the university would have to spend a lot of money on extra security.

Adler, the Jewish Defense spokesman, said his organization would call on other Jews to boycott the hotel if the conference goes on. The group's Web site and telephone number also urge callers to protest to hotel management. "We're a militant self-defense group," Adler said. "The bottom line is, the hotel has to know that there will be big, ugly demonstrations." He said it was important to combat groups such as New Century Foundation before they reach a wider audience. "The bottom line is, every time the Nazis get their message out, they receive new people," Adler said. Adler denied that his group was infringing on the organization's rights to free speech and assembly. "That's what Hitler said, that some people tried to silence him," Adler said. "The reality is, Hitler started with a handful of followers, and Jews said, 'Let him speak.' The fruits of free speech for Nazis was Auschwitz and 6 million Jews dead. Anti-Semitic words lead to anti-Semitic action."

Both organizations have been labeled by civil rights organizations as extremists. The Southern Poverty Law Center calls the New Century Foundation a "hate group" and Taylor a "white supremacist."

The soldiers at Fort Hood had it coming, says a radical Muslim in Queens who travels to mosques around the city spreading anti-American hate and has sent a "Get Well Soon" message to the major behind the Texas massacre.

"An officer and a gentleman was raped while partaking in a pre-emptive attack," Yousef al-Khattab wrote on his Web site, called "Revolution Muslim." "Get well soon Major Nidal. We love you!"

In the twisted logic of al-Khattab, who was born Jewish in New Jersey and converted to Islam in 2004, the 13 slain and 38 wounded Army victims gunned down by the radical one-man sleeper cell were "terrorists" who deserved to die.

These people are soldiers in a volunteer army," he told The Post during a visit on a Woodside, Queens, cafe. "They expect to see combat. They know the danger."

"I read accused the slain terrorists at Ft. Hood are in the eternal hellfire," al-Khattab writes on his Web site.

Army sniper Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan, 35, reportedly shouted "allahu akbar" — Arabic for "God is great" — before unloading more than 100 rounds at soldiers preparing to step off to Iraq and Afghanistan.

A New York bicycle cabbie who last year used his Web site to mock the beheading of journalist Daniel Pearl posted a prayer calling for the murder of Jews and exhorting Muslims to "throw liquid drain cleaner in their faces." And there's nothing authorities can do about it.

Yousef al-Khattab was in contact with Major's Nidal Hasan's best friend, Duane Reasoner. He was in contact with Tarek Mehanna, now under indictment in Boston, Massachusetts, on charges of conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists. He exchanged internet messages with Mehanna's co-conspirator, Daniel Maldonado. He also met with Neil Bryant Vinas, a young New Yorker who has pleaded guilty to plotting to attack trains on the Long Island Rail Road. After the JDO staged a demonstration outside al-Khattab's Al-Qaeda recruiting office Al-Khattab (Joseph Leonard Kaplan) moved to Morocco. You can hear him HERE call JDO violent. Al-Khattab would have found someone sooner or later who would have succeeded in a terrorist act in New York City. How many lives the JDO saved by neutralizing his scum will never be known nor will JDO ever get any credit from the media for doing so.
